The Center for Global Islamic Studies (CGIS) is an intellectual community committed to the interdisciplinary study of Islamic civilization. The Center was established at Lehigh in 2009 with the generous support of a five-year grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Cutting across numerous academic disciplines and departments, CGIS supports the academic exploration of the diverse cultures and rich historical legacy of the Muslim world - from its roots in Abrahamic prophecy and Greek philosophy, to its long interaction with the West and profound impact on global culture, trade, art and architecture, literature, politics, philosophy, science and religious life, from Morocco to Malaysia to Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

CGIS promotes teaching and research designed to take Islamic Studies into and beyond the classroom by offering students, faculty, and the broader community a variety of forums for dialogue, debate, and experiential learning. The Center's intellectual core is distinguished by three distinct signatures:

- a comparative, interdisciplinary approach to Islamic studies that goes beyond narrow geographic areas and political issues to explore the broader landscape of Islamic civilization, both past and present
- supporting research that provides the Lehigh community with multiple outlets to encounter the diversity and dynamism of global Islam
- robust event programming that brings at least three scholars from different academic disciplines to campus for public talks and reading group interactions each semester. CGIS programming includes occasional international conferences on thematic topics with the aim of publication

RESEARCH ACTIVITIES

CGIS spotlights and promotes research and scholarship in interdisciplinary, comparative Islamic Studies. The Center sponsors an annual lecture series with visiting scholars, and an array of campus events (musical performances, workshops, and conferences). A 2016 international conference on Islam in Southeast Asia hosted by CGIS led to the publication of an edited volume: Piety, Politics and Everyday Ethics in Southeast Asian Islam: Beautiful Behavior (London: Bloomsbury Publishing, 2019). The Center organized another conference in April 2022, culminating in a second edited volume entitled, Cyber Muslims: Mapping Islamic Digital Media in the Internet Age (London: Bloomsbury Publishing, 2022).

EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

The launch of the Center for Global Islamic Studies marked a pivotal moment in the continued expansion of the educational experience at Lehigh University. Drawing on the university's experience in building interdisciplinary programs, its institutional commitment to international education, and its substantive relationships with numerous Muslim partners, both in the Lehigh Valley and internationally, the Center for Global Islamic Studies plays a central role in the university's mission to provide Lehigh's students with transformative learning experiences
