

Academic Grievances

If a student has a complaint about a grade or other academic grievance, the first step is to talk to the instructor involved. If the matter is not settled satisfactorily, the student should contact the department chair or division director about the complaint and submit the complaint through the formal grievance procedure within the department. The final course of appeal for a student, if the student is still aggrieved, is with the appropriate dean.